Pateman's theory of the sexual contract begins as a critique of this view. Pateman argues that Locke's view of the social contract completely ignored the position of women with respect to the state. This is the starting point of many feminist critiques of classical theories. Pateman argues that only men have a direct relationship with the state under classical Liberal democratic regimes and that women interact with the state indirectly through the dominant male in their household.

In historical terms there is no social contract only a network of influence amongst powerful individuals who have established their dominance by physical force.

submission where there is ultimately a power imbalance from systemic sexism. The focus of The Sexual Contract is on the false narrative that there is a post-patriarchal or anti-patriarchal society that presently exists as a Sexual Contract - Pateman - - Major Reference Works ...
