Common financial problems observed with small-scale dairy start-ups are often related to the following areas as listed by Axtell et al. (2008):

"[Owners] treating profits as their income instead of paying themselves a salary and investing profits into the business, incorrect costing and pricing of products so that they do not make a profit, poor record keeping so they do not know if they are operating profitably, over-spending or having a loan that is not repayable, and having too many ...
