Introduction to Critical Theory

The Theory of Communicative Action represents a major contribution to contemporary social theory. Not only does it provide a compelling critique of some of the main perspectives in twentieth-century philosophy and social science, but it also presents a systematic synthesis of the many themes that have

Communicative Action In the Marxist reception of Weber's theory of rationalization, from Lukacs to Adorno, the rationalization of society was always thought of as a reification of consciousness. As I have argued in Volume 1, the paradoxes to which this conceptual strategy leads show that rationalization cannot be

THE THEORY OF COMMUNICATIVE ACTION

In the theory of communicative action, that means only spontaneous actions that are beyond the influence of steering media would have any value. For Habermas, that meant concepts of love, creativity, and charisma. Steering media can only be influential within a lifeworld if four specific things happen. The traditional forms of life must be dismantled.

In communicative action participants are not primarily oriented to their own individual successes; they pursue their individual goals under the condition that they can harmonize their plans of action on the basis of common situation definitions.

Basic Concepts in Habermas's Theory of Communicative Action

Communicative action is the underlying theory in which communicative power and communicative reason/rationality refine themselves. Communicative power is the influence that citizens exert upon a state through rational discussions of their interests and values.

Jürgen Habermas (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

In communicative action, or what Habermas later came to call "strong communicative action" in "Some Further Clarifications of the Concept of Communicative Rationality" (1998b, chap. 7; German ed., 1999b), speakers coordinate their action and pursuit of individual (or joint) goals on the basis of a shared understanding that the goals are inherently reasonable or merit-worthy.
