H G Wells, The Time

Machine - British Library
The Time Traveller (for so it will be convenient to speak of him) was expounding a recondite matter to us. His grey eyes shone and twinkled, and his usually pale face was flushed and animated. The re burned brightly, and the soft radiance of the incandescent lights in the lilies of silver caught the bubbles that flashed and passed in our glasses.

Knowing that knowledge of the Morlocks might lead him to his time machine, the Time Traveller descends into one of the wells where he sees a room full of Morlocks and machines. He sees them eating meat, which tells him they are carnivorous, unlike the Eloi. When several Morlocks attack him, he uses matches to fend them off and barely escapes.

Book Review: The Time Machine by H.G. Wells - Lucy A. Snyder
In The Time Machine (1895), Wells's protagonist travels into the distant future - the year 802,701 - to discover that the human race has evolved into two distinct species, the 'Eloi' who live on the surface and the 'Morlocks' who live underground. The Time Traveller's initial observations suggest a utopian society: his first encounter is with the Eloi, who are beautiful but useless, living in plenty and liberated entirely from work.
