The Transcendence of the Ego (French: La Transcendance de l'ego: Esquisse d'une description ph é nomenologique) is a philosophical and psychological essay written by the philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre in 1934 and published in 1936. The essay demonstrates Sartre ' s transition from traditional phenomenological thinking and most notably his break from the philosopher Edmund Husserl ' s school of thought (phenomenology), and into his own.

Maslow's forgotten pinnacle: Self-transcendence - Big Think

Here, however, Sartre attacked Husserl's notion of a transcendental ego. The break with Husserl, in turn, facilitated Sartre's transition from phenomenology to the existentialist doctrines of his masterwork, Being and Nothingness, which was completed a few years later while the author was a prisoner of war.

The Transcendence of the Ego - Wikipedia

It means transcending the illusion that the ego is the fundamental core of our existence.

Transcendence occurs when we recognize the ongoing presence of our unchanging, greater Self that experiences “all” that is happening, including recognizing the concepts and beliefs associated with the formation of the ego itself.

This is where the transcendence of the ego comes in. It is the possibility of limiting your ego as you start looking at the world more objectively.
Rather than linking everything to yourself to affect your ego, find a higher power that you can believe in. By doing so, you will realize how things get much better for you in the long run.

The Transcendence of the Ego is a philosophical essay published by Jean Paul Sartre in 1936. In it, he sets out his view that the self or ego is not itself something that one is aware of. The model of consciousness that Sartre provides in this essay may be outlined as follows.

Ego Transcendence:
What It Is And How To Go About It ...

Sartre, there is no ego which appears to unreflected consciousness, and it is this that leads Sartre, in Transcendence of the Ego, to describe that level of consciousness as "pre-personal" or impersonal (TE, 36; Fr., i9). Sartre acknowledges that there is an ego encountered in reflection (viewed "'out of the corner of the eye,'" as it were.

How To Transcend The Ego Through Self-Inquiry | Zenful Spirit
Sartre's take on the consciousness as purely spontaneous and without any trace of I or I-concept is suspiciously similar to some of the Buddhist rendering of consciousness: the ego as the transcendent unity of all psychic states and actions "constructed" by the reflecting consciousness and located o ...more.

most basic sense what is commonly refereed to as an “ ego ” is a concept of oneself – an aggregate of notions, ideas and perceptions about what one is – and it stems from a form of intelligence identified in this project as “ identity-consciousness ” – intelligence that thinks and perceives in terms of identities.
