The butterfly pea flower may be known for its brilliant blue color, but it isn't just another pretty floral face. The plant is commonly found in Southeast Asia, and its distinctive blossoms are not only brewed and consumed as a floral tea, but are also said to have medicinal value, and are used as a natural dye (via Green Blender).

The Truth About Butterfly Pea Flower

Butterflies are primarily diurnal, flying in the daytime. At night, or during inclement weather, most butterflies perch on the underside of a leaf, crawl deep between blades of grass or into a crevice in rocks, or find some other shelter, and sleep. Butterflies are cold-blooded, meaning they cannot regulate their own body temperature.
