The geographical centre of Earth is the geometric centre of all land surfaces on Earth. In a more strict definition, it is the superficial barycenter of the mass distribution produced by treating each continent or island as a region of a thin shell of uniform density and approximating the geoid with a sphere. The centre is inside Earth but can be projected to the closest point on the surface.

The View from the Center of the Universe is, though, a reminder that cosmology is much more than simply determining the age of the universe and the ratio of visible matter to dark matter and dark energy. It is, at its roots, an essential part of humanity ' s quest to determine our place in the universe, and something even today not necessarily exclusively in the realm of science.
