The War of the Worlds Summary Fasten your seatbelt, folks, because the plot of War of the Worlds can be a little bumpy. Wells' narrator jumps from talking about the whole world, to talking about himself, to talking about what his brother's been up to. Don't say we didn't warn you.

The War of the Worlds : Chapter Five The Heat-Ray. After the glimpse I had had of the Martians emerging from the cylinder in which they had come to the earth from their planet, a kind of fascination paralysed my actions. I remained standing knee-deep in the heather, staring at the mound that hid them. ...

The War of the Worlds Chapter Summaries | Course Hero
No one would have believed in the last years of the nineteenth century that this world was being watched keenly and closely by intelligences greater than man's and yet as mortal as his own; that as men busied themselves about their various concerns they were scrutinised and studied, perhaps almost as narrowly as a man with a microscope might scrutinise the transient creatures that swarm and multiply in a drop of water.

The War of the Worlds: Book 1, Chapter 5, The Heat-Ray The narrator drives to Leatherhead where his family lives and leaves his wife there. Though he should've stayed in Leatherhead that night (he says now), he has to go back to Woking to return the horse and cart he rented. Also, he confesses to having some "war-fever" – he wants to be there to see the Martians defeated.

Chapter Sixteen The Exodus from London So you understand the roaring wave of fear that swept through the greatest city in the world just as Monday was dawning—the stream of flight rising swiftly to a torrent, lashing in a foaming tumult round the railway stations, banked up into a horrible struggle about the shipping in the Thames, and hurrying by every available channel northward and eastward.

Summary. Book 1, Chapter 1. The novel begins with the ominous assertion that there is intelligent life watching humanity. The obliviousness of humanity to this menace cannot be sustained for long; the unnamed narrator points out that these minds are to those of humans as human minds are to those of beasts.
