Is what you believe about marriage getting in the way of a GREAT relationship? When you've put into practice all the usual advice, but your marriage still falls short of the intimacy and joy you want, what then? Are patience and perseverance your only hope for a better relationship? Author and speaker Sheila Wray Gregoire says, "Absolutely not!" The solution to a happier relationship is not found in being a more patient, more perfect wife, but in taking responsibility for what you can do—and especially for how you think about your marriage. She challenges you to replace pat Christian answers with nine biblical truths that will radically shift your perspective on your husband, your relationship, and your role in God's design for marriage, including...

- My Husband Can't Make Me Mad
- Being One Is More Important Than Being Right
- Having Sex Is Not the Same as Making Love

With humor and honesty, Sheila invites you to believe that God wants to bring oneness and intimacy to your marriage—and challenges you to partner with Him in that process by changing the way you think.

The premise of the book is that the concept of "spread" and the business of "spreading good practice" as we continue to apply it in healthcare, may be a large part of why "spread" doesn't happen. This is a personal account reflecting on many years worth of consulting practice, mistakes included The Busy Gardener's Task List Tignum

In the past 50 years we have seen and documented more environmental changes than in all of recorded history. Why are these things happening now? Is man contributing to, or the cause of the problem? Or is this just a natural cycle that we happen to be living through in our time? Whatever the answers to these questions you can be sure of one thing: our Earth's environment is changing and we are living during that time of change. We need to be sure of this and not be complacent. The time for us to learn what to do is now and not after disaster strikes us and our families. This book is not strictly about stockpiling guns, medical supplies, food, and water, then barricading your family in a concrete house somewhere in the wilderness. This is about understanding what is changing, why it's changing, and what you can do to protect yourself and your family under these unknown circumstances. Physical preparation is important, but it's not the only thing that needs to be done and it definitely should NOT be done without correct understanding and attitude. The book's unique approach to being prepared for the coming change is more than just physical preparation from a survivalist standpoint. Rather than use a strict guns-and-glory generic survival plan for everyone, the reader is given general guidelines with the proper thought provoking questions to spark a better attitude. Throughout the text the reader is asked questions that only he or she can answer. This approach allows everyone to prepare and learn according to their own understanding and ability. A natural question that comes to everyone's mind is, "What if this doesn't happen?" This is a perfectly valid and understandable question and is directly addressed in the book. The author pulls no punches when it comes to the various facts and predictions listed in the book, their probability of occurring, and the likely outcomes. But he also addresses the non-believer: "One more thing to think about that people always ask me is: "What if this doesn't happen?" That's a good question and a very valid one. What if Earth changes are nothing more than that millennial madness that I mentioned earlier? Look at it this way: How prepared are you to handle even the smallest disaster or upset? Prepared and ready? For how long? A couple of days? A week? A month? Two? Three? What about only being slightly prepared? Maybe if you really think fast when something happens you and your family could survive a week without services and conveniences. How does that make you feel? What if that were the case and the situation in your area lasted two weeks? Most people are the "It won't happen to me" thinkers. Yet every year a large number of people die because there was a freak tornado, torrential rainstorm, winter snowstorm, power outage, chemical spill, water supply disruption, or even a simple heat wave. Did you ever wonder why people who weren't caught directly in the path of the disaster die in those situations? The answer is obvious; they never thought it would happen to them so they never prepared for it." Whether you believe in Earth changes or not having this book could save yourself and your family a great deal of hardship, and possibly your life, when something unexpected happens. Why take a chance on your family's future? Be prepared, spiritually, physically, and mentally for the inevitable.

Mulholland and the St. Francis Dam Failure

"Quote: During the Los Angeles Coroner's Inquest, William Mulholland said, "this inquest is a very painful for me to have to attend but it is the occasion of that is painful. The only ones I envy about this whole thing are the ones who are dead." In later testimony, after responding to a question, he added, "Whether it is good or bad, don't blame anyone else, you just fasten it on me. If there was an error in human judgment, I was the human, I won't try to fasten it on anyone else." William Mulholland, chief engineer, Water Department Los Angeles Every man-made disaster and catastrophe has at least six Cascade Events leading up to the final event, the catastrophe according to the Rule of Seven. This is a quick read of the Cascade Events of the second greatest loss of life in the history of California: The St. Francis Dam. Bob examines the Rule of Seven, and how human error plays a role in many catastrophes. Nothing happens in isolation or as a result of a single event. Thus, by learning from history, we can gain insight into preventing a similar catastrophe in the future. William Mulholland, a self-taught engineer, brought water to Los Angeles, but he also brought a catastrophe in the form of the St. Francis dam which failed, killing hundreds. From the very land the dam was placed on, to its design, to the failure of Mulholland on the very day the dam would collapse when called by the worried dam-keeper, to see the pending catastrophe. This is one of many catastrophes that Bob Mayer, former Green Beret, West Point Graduate and NY Times Bestselling Author, examines in his series of shorts: The Anatomy of a Catastrophe.
