The first in this series of 3 is "The Potato Factory", "Tommo and Hawk" is the second with "Solomon's Song" being third. I have not yet read the last but The PF is a thrilling book and sets the background to T&H so I recommend reading them all and in the right order, even though T&H is a brilliant book in its own right.

Tommo & Hawk continues the story started in the Potato Factory. It further adds to the contention that Bryce Courtenay is the best storyteller since Hemmingway. His depiction of 19th century Tasmania is a triumph. Not only can you feel and almost smell what the characters are experiencing, but his tale is gripping.

Tommo and Hawk is book 2 of the Australian trilogy by Bryce Courtenay. Tommo and Hawk is a wonderfully sometimes painful account of two brothers in their search to become men. Bryce Courtenay, in telling this story, gives the reader the taste of what it would be like to live in the mid 1800's. The reader is not just reading the tale.
