units, with teaching material designed for at least 8 hours of English a week. Unit title phrased as a big question sparks students' curiosity and builds engagement with the topic. Students come up with answers throughout the unit and reflect on what they have learnt on the Now I Know page at the end. Unit objectives phrased as simplified GSE descriptors appear at the beginning and at the end of the unit, helping students see what they have learnt. International English box highlights differences between British and American English. BBC video clips (topic and story clips) enhance engagement and understanding of the topic. One text per unit is factual, allowing students to gain non-ELT knowledge, and another text is a story focusing on a value. Clear grammar practice helps students build confidence with the language. Strategy boxes help teach all skills.

As director Gus Van Sant observes in the introduction to Matt Damon's and Ben Affleck's screenplay Good Will Hunting, the two young actors somewhat resemble the characters they play in the film: they're best friends, and Affleck (who plays Chuckie) habitually chauffeurs Damon (Will), who doesn't drive. Van Sant says we can see how badly Damon drives by watching the film's last scene, in which he is actually driving the car with the camera mounted on it. But Damon and company write better than he drives; this script contains some of the boldest, best monologues since Pulp Fiction. Van Sant and cast member Robin Williams helped the young actors tame the tigers in their cranial tanks, trimming the script into a precision instrument. Though the stills from the film are not perfectly matched to their places in the script, this story remains as much a joy to read as it is to watch on the big screen.
