The Slovak society is in the process of transformation. The main direction of transformation is political, from the totalitarian to the democratic society. The growing cultural variety of Slovakia increases the importance of multicultural education for student teachers. This curriculum guide for multicultural education in teacher training in Slovakia has been developed with advice and input from university colleagues from all over the world. The purpose of the curriculum is to provide a framework for the inclusion of multicultural education in Slovak universities. The guide is divided into the following sections: "Curriculum objectives" ("Basic concepts"; "Purpose of curriculum"; "Curriculum objectives"; "Character of curriculum"); "The starting points of multicultural education in Slovakia" ("Needs of the society"; "The needs of the school system"; "External conditions"); "The sense of multicultural education" ("Expectations"; "Key values"; "The importance of multicultural education"; "The character of multicultural education"; "Target groups"); "Intercultural competencies of a teacher" ("Content standards"; "Performance standards"; "Abilities"; "Skills"; "Personality standards"; "Attitudes"); "The content of multicultural education" ("Themes"; "Methods"; "Co-operating areas of education"); and "The course of multicultural education" ("Hidden curriculum"; "The

Latinx people are one of the largest ethnic minority groups in the United States (U.S.), with Spanish being the country's most common non-English language and Spanish being the most common non-English language of Latinx people.

The mental health disparities impacting this population adversely affects their mental health status and receipt of culturally appropriate and linguistically competent (CALC) mental health care. Providing Spanish-language mental health services to Latinx clients is a specialized area of practice, which requires Spanish-speaking bilingual clinicians (SSBC) to receive specialized training. Presently, SSBC are providing services in a language different than the one they received training in, creating ethical challenges for these clinicians and their supervisors. The primary goal of the proposed training curriculum guide is to supplement the professional training that U.S.-based SSBC receive in English. The purpose of this dissertation is to create a training curriculum guide centered around the provision of CALC mental health care to the Latinx population in the U.S. After a review of relevant literature relating to Latinx mental health disparities, the gaps in training and support for SSBC, and the concept and benefits of cultural immersion training experiences, this dissertation presents a training curriculum guide intended to be implemented in international cultural immersion clinical mental health training programs in Spanish-speaking countries. The presented guide is part one of a series of training guides aiming to comprise a training program to further support and train U.S.-based SSBC. This project is an ever-evolving effort to bridge the gap in training of SSBC, ultimately reducing Latinx mental health disparities. Carpentry 1 and 2, Course No. 763.1 and 763.2
