Each lab group should receive one flower and dissecting equipment. In their lab notebook, they should sketch the external structures on the plant. At this point in the lab, they should not try to label any portion of the flower. They should simply note where they believe new tissue arises (as they did in the leaf lab the previous day).

During this exercise, you will be dissecting a snake or a turtle in partners and comparing your anatomical findings to what you see in pre-done dissection of a lizard. It is beyond the scope of this lab to do very detailed dissections.

One popular preschool experiment is a bean dissection and observation experiment. This project allows the child to learn how bean seeds evolve and develop, which can lead to further questions about plant and animal life. Be sure to provide adult supervision, as this project requires the use of a knife.

Steps. Part 1 of 3: Preparing for the Experiment. 1.
Gather your lab materials.
You will ...
