Linda Kreger
Silverman, author of Upside-down Brilliance, describes VSLs in this way: "The visual spatial learner thrives on complexity, yet struggles with easy material; loves difficult puzzles, but hates drill and repetition; is great at geometry and physics, but poor at phonics and spelling. She has keen visual memory, but poor auditory memory; is creative and imaginative, but inattentive ...

In 1981, Linda
coined the term “visual-spatial learner” and has been developing techniques, creating identification
methods and
improving teaching strategies for this population for 30 years. This

Gifted learners
are considered
'the lucky,
smart kids', but
as Ms Silverman so brilliantly lays out, that is
NOT always the case. Some
gifted learners

have an "upside down

I've put a hold on Upside-down brilliance: The visual spatial learner by Dr. Linda Silverman at my library which is essentially a textbook on VSLs and how to teach them, I can't wait to read it. As far as I know from what I have read, VSLs mostly use the right side of their brains, as opposed to auditory sequential thinkers who use the left ...
