This new edition of an established text provides a succinct and up-to-date historical overview of the story of English literature. Focusing on how writing both reflects and challenges the periods in which it is produced, John Peck and Martin Coyle combine close readings of key texts with recent critical thinking on the interaction of literary works and culture. Providing a lively introductory guide to English literature from Beowulf to the present day, the authors write in their characteristically lucid and accessible style. A true masterpiece of clarity and compression, this is essential reading for undergraduate students coming across the vast areas of English literature for the first time and looking for a way of making critical sense of the texts being studied. In addition, the concise nature and narrative structure of this book makes it excellent reading for general readers. This book is dedicated to the description and application of various different theoretical models to identify the near and mid-infrared spectra of symmetric and spherical top molecules in their gaseous form. Theoretical models based on the use of group theory are applied to rigid and non-rigid molecules, characterized by the phenomenon of tunneling and large amplitude motions. The calculation of vibration-rotation energy levels and the analysis of infrared transitions are applied to molecules of ammonia (NH₃) and methane (CH₄). The applications show how interactions at the molecular scale modify the near and mid-infrared spectra of isolated molecules, under the influence of the pressure of a nano-cage (the substitution site of a rare gas matrix, clathrate, fullerene or zeolite) or a surface, and allow us to identify the characteristics of the perturbing environment. This book provides valuable support for teachers and researchers but is also intended for engineering students, working research engineers and Master's and doctorate students.

Gandhi, a CEO? Absolutely—and an incomparable example for our uncertain times, when we need leaders we can trust and admire. Not only was he a moral and intensely spiritual man, but also music, says author Chintamani Rao. The music we hear is a composite whole made up of the sounds of different instruments. They don't all make the same sound at the same time but played together they move us. And that is how marketing communications must work. To produce that effect an orchestra performs to a musical score, under the direction of a conductor. So must marketing communications. When we have a plan, assemble our communications instruments and conduct them effectively to make one big sound, we can move millions to think, feel and act. Drawing upon his own long and diverse experience as well as his observations as a lifelong student of marketing, the author tells us how integrated marketing communications works, why it doesn't, and how to make marketing music.

Despite the burgeoning body of knowledge specific to toxic stress, medical trauma and maternal separation, the delivery of developmentally supportive, neuroprotective care for hospitalized infants is inconsistent at best. Bedside clinicians struggle to integrate evidence-based best practices in neurodevelopmental care. Challenges include competing priorities, knowledge gaps, staffing demands, access to appropriate therapeutic resources, and documentation limitations. This book addresses these challenges in a thoughtful, comprehensive and practical way. The author provides evidence-based strategies and resources to improve not only the quality of the neurodevelopmentally supportive care provided but, also the consistency and coherence in which the care is documented. Clear, concise, comprehensive documentation has been proven to positively impact patient outcomes, The INDIA EBUS platform, a forward thinking, trans-disciplinary interface for improved documentation, opens the door for future innovations in digital platforms and artificial intelligence that improve the delivery of safe, high quality, patient-focused healthcare. Mary Coughlin, MS, NNP, RNC-EPresident and Founder, Caring Essentials Collaborative, LLCBoston, MA USA Preterm babies are at high risk for developmental disability and to large extent a lifelong problem. Presently the national programs are aimed at reducing mortality and is successful to considerable extent. But this is increasing the morbidity of academic, cognitive, behavioral, social, communication and other developmental problems. In this context there is an urgent need to protect the brain at the earliest. But in terms of developmental care there are many lacunae in the present infrastructure and some of them are oEmphasis on or reliance on post discharge intervention for supporting the developmentoNon individualized (mainly based on behavioral assessment) developmental care in Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU)oNo standardization or policy for developmental care olack of documentation for developmental care or it is time laboriousoLow level of evidence for management of neurodevelopmental careoLack of enough trained manpower mainly Neonatal TherapistoIndividual component practice preferred over comprehensive management for developmental care though bundle care approach is found to be effective.oand many other Considering all these, INDIA EBUS is developed. INDIA EBUS is designed for protecting brain at the earliest for better performance throughout life. INDIA is an acronym for Individual New-born Developmental Intervention Application. EBUS stands for Evidence Based and Ultra SMART (Specific, Measurable, Accountable, Realistic solutions for Timely intervention). The main feature of INDIA EBUS is all the strategies suggested are evidence based which is a cornerstone of specialty care. Another key element of this is all the components are measurable and you will get a score for each developmentally supportive intervention. Rather than relying on the post discharge developmental intervention you can begin the early intervention during acute care. Mission Statement of INDIA EBUS: INDIA EBUS is dedicated to the highest quality of ultra-early intervention delivered with trust, thoughtfulness and care. Advertising is the most visible aspect of marketing communications, but it is often just an introductory greeting, the first handshake. What your target customer sees, hears and experiences of the product and the brand-in use, at retail, in social media and at other points of interaction—must be in keeping with the expectations its advertising sets up. Putting them all together and making them work consistently and with synergy is what is called integrated marketing communications. Running an integrated marketing communications programme is like making sounds of different instruments. They don't all make the same sound at the same time but played together they move us. And that is how marketing communications must work. To produce that effect an orchestra performs to a musical score, under the direction of a conductor. So must marketing communications.
