I recently picked up an old 1980's Vivitar 3500 Zoom Thyristor flash with the DM/C module (for Canon). This is an "automatic" flash with no manual power setting other than full power.

The head has three manual zoom positions, and it's powered by two AA batteries.

Two years on (from November 4, 2002), I've just come across TUAN HOANG's clear, concise information about the yellow triangle on the Vivitar 3500. I, too, have bought a used 3500. I, too, was unsure what the triangle meant. Now I have the data I need, thanks to Tuan Hoang and to Martha Taylor, who raised the matter in the first place.

James, I don't know the 3500 specifically, and I don't know where to find manuals. But most of those little thyristor Vivitars are pretty simple to use. There will be a selector switch somewhere, with two colors and a position in between. There will be a scale on the back with a sliding gadget and some color indicators.

tested was
at 8.9
volts, so unless Vivitar made more than
