Most of the time the stock market is climbing north. Interspersed between bull markets are those times when rookie investors act as if the sky is falling. Long bull markets turn normally intelligent investors into casino gamblers; they even use gambling terminology: we're due for a bear market or as they say at the casino, "Red is due after 8 black spins" at the roulette wheel; as if the ball ...

Possible IRS Option 1: If your tax rate is 20% when you sell the exercised stock (LTCG), the IRS refunds the difference (8%) on the portion that you paid the AMT on (the bargain element). For the remainder of the portion (ie. spread between FMV at exercise and sale price), you still pay your usual 20% LTCG.

As the tax deadline approaches we will discuss two problems preventing you from filing your taxes: missing or inaccurate tax documents. Some small employers forget to send W-2s preventing you from filing your taxes; other businesses may send incorrect forms. K-1s are even worse. With a K-1 you may not even know what the numbers should be and they always come late in the tax season.

However, given the importance of this particular election, I, personally, would not want to leave it to chance that the form was, in fact, transmitted in my tax package. Rather, I would feel much more comfortable knowing I had printed out the election form, inserted it in the proper order with my other forms, and mailed the package to the IRS.

The Online Tax Guy - Your Best Tax News and Tips

If you work with a CPA or an accounting firm to get your taxes done, you might have received some nerve-wracking news recently: due to a combination of factors including our recent government shutdown and the new tax laws, a lot of tax preparers are behind schedule and not everybody's taxes will be filed on time. To quote The New York Times:

Tax extension deadline 2020: What happens if I miss the date?

The tax recess is over: For the legions of us who, this spring, filed for an October 15 tax extension, the extension part ends sooooooon. Taxes are due on Thursday.

So if you have $10,000 of income taxed at 10% that means your tax liability is $1000. Then if you have a 10% tax deduction that reduces the taxable income to $9,000 and your tax liability is $900. To answer your question, no you can not take the 30% solar tax credit on the property because it's not your primary residence. Period.

Your tax preparer cannot ethically hold your tax forms "hostage." As my fellow attorney has mentioned, a strongly worded letter to the preparer is certainly in order. If that does not work, then I would report your preparer to the IRS using Form 14157, Complaint: Tax Return Preparer, check the appropriate box, and send it to the IRS at the address specified on the form.
