Why I Wake Early Mary

Summary. Her first poem, "Why I Wake Early," begins with a "hello" addressed to the "best preacher," the maker of the morning, the creator of the world. That world may have its "miserable and crotchety" people, but the "preacher," who speaks through nature, is the source of light and direction, and "ease[s] us with warm touching." The speaker's...

Why I Wake Early (2004) Every day I see or hear something that more or less kills me with delight, that leaves me like a needle in the haystack of light. "Mindful" New and Selected Poems, Volume 2 (2005) I don't want to end up simply having visited this world. "When Death Comes" You want to cry aloud for your mistakes.

Why I Wake Early Mary

Up high in a skyscraper in down town Edmonton, Alberta I face the window while reading Mary's poem. I too awoke early, which is easy to do here given how early the sun rises this far north. The sun emerges out of my vision, but the rays hit the windows of the office building across the street, and they reflect mightily into my eyes as I write.
